The Walnut Hills High School

THE two excellent high schools, which for nearly half a century supplied means of advanced secondary education to the ambitious youth of our city, becoming overcrowded and altogether inadequate to the cultural demands of greater Cincinnati, had to be supplemented by another institution of their class. The urgent necessity for establishing another high school was felt most pressingly by citizens of that part of the city spreading northward to the attractive hill-tops in the townships of Columbia and Millcreek, and taking in the urban localities of Walnut Hills, Mount Auburn, Avondale, and Clifton.

As early as the year 1890 active members of the Board of Education and of the Union Board of High Schools were practically considering proposals which led to the erection of a commodious and really magnificent new high school building, on a lot two hundred feet square, located on the corner of Burdett and Ashland Avenues, in the midst of a population eagerly desirous of the best educational advantages.

The school edifice, one of the most elegant public buildings in the city, admirably designed for the accommodation of a large school, was completed in the Autumn of 1895, at a cost of $120,503, the lot costing an additional $24,000. The house contains seventeen light, airy recitation rooms, a spacious assembly hall, a fine gymnasium, a good chemical and physical laboratory, and a biological laboratory, besides a general office, a library, and various lavatories.

The committee having in charge the construction of this noble building was composed of the following gentlemen: Jacob E. Cormany, H. H. Mithoefer, Joseph J. Parker, H. W. Allens, and Charles Weidner, Jr.

The local committee selected from the Union Board of High Schools to exercise supervisory care over the newly-organized high school consisted, at first, of H. H. Mithoefer, John Schwaab, R. D. Barney, Drausin Wulsin, and William McCallister. Since the initial organization, changes have, from time to time, been made in the composition of the committee, by the retirement of some members and the appointment of others, so that the body at present consists of John Schwaab, Chairman; Jacob Schroder, William J. Klein, L. J. Dauner, and Dr. Robert W. Stewart.

The Walnut Hills High School was opened in September, 1895, with a corps of twenty teachers and an attendance of 684 pupils. On Friday, October 11, the building was formally dedicated.

The Superintendent and the several school officers upon whom devolved the delicate and complicated function of overseeing the affairs of the great school their energy had created were equal to the responsibility. The organization and equipment of the school were completed with more rapidity than was expected, so that, within a very few weeks from the start, everything was in running order, and a zealous esprit du corps already manifested itself among the pupils. Necessarily the success of the school must depend upon the vigilance and fidelity of the teaching body.

Six of the teachers were transferred from the older high schools: two from Hughes, Mr. Bishop and Mr. Venable; four from Woodward, Mr. A. S. Henshaw, Miss Rachel V. Wheeler, Mrs. C. D. Klemm, and Miss Eulalie Artois. Other experienced instructors were selected from various schools in which they had won reputation, or were chosen on account of high attainments in college. Mr. H. E. Newman, teacher of chemistry and physics, had been instructor in the University. Mr. Julius Fuchs was placed in charge of the German teaching. Mr. Arthur Knoch was called to direct the athletic training of the pupils and to have charge of the gymnasium. Without specifying the grades to which they were assigned, or the particular branches by them taught, we here record the rest of the names of those who formed the teaching corps in the first two years of the history of the school. These are: Miss Mary E. Magurk, Miss Henrietta Reuschel, Miss Helen Shrader, Miss Belle Woods, Miss Margaret E. Layman, Miss Agatha Hope Rice, Miss Jane S. O'Hara, Miss Eleanor Passel, Miss Esther H. Hagen, Miss Mamie B. Walker, and Miss Alma Diserens. The special department of drawing was conducted by Miss Frances Kohnky, and the musical directorship of the school was intrusted to Mr. Joseph Surdo.

Since the organization of the faculty, in 1895, several changes have been made: Miss Hagen and Miss Walker both resigned in 1897, and in January of the same year Miss Laura E. Aldrich was appointed teacher of elocution in the new school. In the following year, 1898, Miss Alice L. Betts, Miss Louise Spilman, and Miss Alma S. Fick were added to the teaching force, and in 1899 Mme. Eleanor Peltier was appointed teacher of French. She resigned in 1900, and M. Nonnez was called to fill her place. Miss Diserens withdrew in 1899, and Miss Frances Kohnky was transferred to Hughes. Dr. W. H. Venable resigned in 1900, and his son, Emerson Venable, was appointed to succeed him as teacher of literature. Miss Magurk has gone to Woodward School and Miss Rice to Hughes, from which Miss Frances Kohnky and Miss Nora Ettlinger have been transferred to Walnut Hills. Miss Henrietta Reuschel has been transferred to the Woodward colony. Since 1901 the department of drawing has been under the able direction of Miss Jeanette Cist. Other new members of the faculty are: Mr. Paul Francis Walker, who was appointed instructor in Spanish in 1902; Mr. A. M. Crane, and Miss Agnes Brown, both of whom were added to the teaching corps at the beginning of the last term.

The steadily increasing attendance of the school has necessitated the establishment, during the past year, of a "colony" department, which has its present quarters in the Twenty-second District School Building, on Walnut Hills. The two rooms occupied by the colony accommodate one hundred and sixty first-year pupils, whose class-work is supervised by two instructors, Miss Nora Ettlinger, and Miss Agnes Brown.

The entire high-school faculty, including special teachers, now numbers ten men and sixteen women.

The principal, Mr. John Remsen Bishop, a Harvard graduate, who, in 1882-3, was teacher of Greek in St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., in 1884-7; principal of Princeton, N. J., Preparatory School; and from 1888 to 1895 instructor in Greek and Latin in Hughes High School, has strenuously labored to carry into successful operation in the new field to which his energies were assigned, the pedagogical theory and practice suggested by the following words from his own pen: "Who is it that said: 'Remember that your discipline must result in a self-governing being?'" It is the aim of this school never to forget this injunction of perhaps the greatest thinker in the domain of education. Dependence upon the will of others to force us to decision or action is vicious in its essence. The high school of to-day ought to be well enough established to put aside shams of all kinds—to call to itself the hearty support of parents and school authorities. It should be strong enough to pursue its progress toward the only good worth reaching, self-government and self-activity, although one in ten of its pupils should thereby be declared, temporarily or permanently, poor material for citizenship. This school stands for the freedom of the teacher and for absolute fidelity as the justification of that freedom. Conscience, and not force, will be here the ultimate appeal, as soon as circumstances will permit so radical a change from local tradition. In the meantime, progress is to be made in this direction as rapidly as possible. "'The need of having the feelings on the side of action has long been recognized as imperative,' says one of our well-known school men. This school aims to recognize this imperative need, with no shirking of temporary inconveniences caused by this recognition. Lofty aim, thoroughness of daily work, honor and truth in all things, are the watchwords of our progress. We shall thus win to our support all who have good ethical impulses and give full exercise to these qualities. Many who are ethically weak we shall, through exercise, strengthen. No one will leave this school without an increased respect for right doing and high thinking. We shall teach love of learning, as well as learning, and shall hope to see the future of our work, not in school records, but in noble lives."

In conclusion, a brief account of the material equipment of the Walnut Hills High School. Though a fine building does not make an excellent school, it goes far to facilitate the work of the educator. The light, airy, cheery recitation rooms of this school, most of which are decorated with artistic and appropriate pictures, are themselves silent teachers. The gymnasium is one of the completest in the West. The laboratory, for practical work in chemistry and physics, is fitted up in accordance with modern requirements. The library, though not yet large, is growing steadily, and it contains a very choice selection of standard books, in history, elementary science, literature, and especially in the Greek and Roman classics. There is also on its shelves a valuable series of works in German and in French. Add to all these a carefully selected assortment of cyclopedias, dictionaries, and other necessary reference books. Probably this library is the best of its size, and for its purpose, of any in the city.

The school is supplied with a complete set of excellent maps. A good lantern, with numerous stereopticon slides illustrating various branches of study, has been made useful by some of the teachers.

The school paper, a monthly publication called THE GLEAM, has been conducted with zeal and vigor since the beginning of the year 1896.

There has been an organized body of cadets maintained by the boys ever since the school was founded. The Athletic Association, an organization to further the practice of foot-ball and other sports, has taken a sufficiently prominent part in competitive affairs to give the school a high reputation for systematic bodily training.

The debating society is of vast benefit to its members and is a credit to the school. This association was the first in Cincinnati to challenge and encounter in public discussion a rival body of its kind from another city.

The motto of the Walnut Hills High School Sursum ad Summum, should inspire its little army of students to the most persevering efforts for worthier ends.

W. H. VENABLE.

MADOLIN ADLER.

"None knew thee but to love thee;
None named thee but to praise."

Madolin has many qualities which are highly commendable. She has all those which are essential to make up a true and noble woman. Besides this, Madolin has a sweet, bird-like voice, which vies with the nightingale. All that is sweet, lovable, womanly, and true, is combined in this one being.

MERWYN AULTMAN, A K Φ; Δ A Φ.

ASSISTANT TREASURER, ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION; TRACK TEAM; BASE-BALL TEAM; GLEAM STAFF; SECOND LIEUTENANT, CADETS; REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"Eek thereto he was right a merry man."

Mert is one of the most popular fellows of our class, possessing, in addition to a lively wit, many congenial qualities. As a runner he is second to none. He will, in all probability, be found at the 'Varsity next year.

SELINA ABRAHAM.

"She is herself a dowry."

Selina is an exceptional girl, being one of the youngest pupils that ever graduated from the school. She is a sweet, fascinating girl, and greatly admired by all. She will continue her studies at the 'Varsity, where, we feel, she will be a great credit to the school.

MAY ATTIG.

"When she will, she will, and you may depend on it."

May, in mind and mien, represents a modern Minerva. But to her intimate friends, the wit which underlies her wisdom makes her a companion whom they both love and enjoy. In the future we will not be surprised to hear of her ultimate success in whatever she may undertake.

LOU. E. ANDREW.

"Her mind with thousand virtues stored."

Lou. has won a large circle of friends during her course at school. She is a member of the College Class, and is an ardent student. Lou. will be greatly missed by her many friends next year, when she will continue her studies at Lebanon University.

MABEL ANDRIDGE.

"How pretty her blushing was, and how she blushed again."

Mabel is the fortunate possessor of a sunny and jovial disposition, which wins her much admiration. She not only has numerous friends but is herself a true friend. Once a friend, always so. She is very popular with the girls of the club of which she is a member, and also with all her classmates.

MAUD E. ANDRIDGE.

CAPTAIN, GIRLS GYM TEAM.

"Unrivalled as thy merit, be thy fame."

A girl of sterling qualities, as all who know her will readily testify. Her sweet disposition and true worth have made her one of the most loved members of the class of '04. The loyalty of her little company of gymnasts gives excellent proof of her executive ability.

ESTELLE AUER.

"I never saw an eye so bright, and yet so soft as hers."

Estella is one of the bright, pretty girls of the College Class. By her winning ways she has made a host of friends. She will probably continue her studies at an Eastern college, where she will, no doubt, be one of the shining stars.

LAURA BAER.

"My heart is true as steel."

Laura is one of the jolliest girls in our class. She is never seen in recitations or in the halls that she is not smiling or, at least, looking pleasant. She is bubbling over so with good will that she is at times taken to task for it. This, for a time, causes a frown to darken her face, but the storm is soon over, and her smile appears again, bright and cheerful as the sun.

LEO. J. BRUMLEVE.

TREASURER, DEBATING CLUB; GLEAM STAFF; REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"A worthy young man, indeed, sir."

"Pope" has taken an unusual interest in the literary side of life, and he has distinguished himself in the eyes of his classmates by the war-story which he contributed to The Gleam. He is a prominent member of the Debating Club, and his friends will not be surprised to hear that he intends to study law at the Cincinnati Law School next year.

WANDA BACHARACH.

"To know her is to love her."

Those who are fortunate enough to have Wanda for a friend appreciate her sweet and noble qualities. Her modest and unassuming manner have won the esteem of her classmates. She will seek to increase her knowledge at the Varsity.

LOCKWOOD E. BOYLE, K Δ Σ.

BASE-BALL TEAM; FIRST LIEUTENANT, CADETS; SCHOOL ORCHESTRA.

"His heart and hand, both open and both free."

How much people appreciate a good-natured fellow, a fellow who can't do too much for you! Such a person is "Lock." It's like coming from darkness into the sunlight to meet him. He is a prominent member of the orchestra; in fact, "Dot leetle dutch bandt" couldn't do without him. He will attend the Miami Medical College.

HELEN BALZ.

"Her lovely looks a sprightly mind disclose."

Helen is a girl who is a good student and a faithful friend. She is very jolly, and she is liked by all her classmates. It is said that her work in German is excellent.

HARLEY BROADWELL.

FIRST SERGEANT, CADETS; GYM TEAM.

"His heart was mirthful to excess."

Whether at work or play, "Chump" enters into whatever he does with a vim and vigor which have at all times characterized his nature. He is a jolly, good fellow, and we feel positive that he will attain success in whatever vocation he assumes. His artistic genius has greatly assisted in the embellishment of this book.

JOSEPHINE BERMAN.

REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"Hospitality smiling with gladness, she has heart with room for every joy."

Josie has a stability of character which all her friends admire. She is a talented elocutionist, and last Winter she had the honor of reading one of Mr. Kinney's poems in the presence of that great poet. Her delightful conversation and gracious tact on all occasions have endeared her to all her schoolmates. She will probably continue her studies at the University next year.

JULIA BAXTER.

"Music can soften pain to ease."

A talented musician is Julia. The girls will never forget how she enlivened the exercises of the gym. We hope that she will continue in the art in which she is so accomplished, and we expect to hear great things of her in the future.

CAROLYN BLACK.

"I will discourse some eloquent music."

Carolyn is one of the most accomplished girls in the school. She is equally proficient in piano-playing and in drawing. She has a gentle and reserved disposition, and is highly esteemed by all her classmates.

RAYMOND BURNS.

"With too much quickness ever to be taught,
With too much thinking to have common thought."

Ray is a student of whom the Greek Class may justly boast. He has many sterling qualities, and is liked by all. His poetical abilities are said to equal those of his ancestor, Robert Burns.

JOHN B. BISHOP.

CAPTAIN, CADETS; GLEAM STAFF.

"Gads, daggers, belts, blades, and scabbards, this is the very gentleman."

A better Captain could not have been chosen. John has a remarkably cool head (looks are sometimes deceiving), and he has proven himself a master artist in drawing a sword. Yet, when it comes to down-right killing, time is all that suffers at his hands.

MILDRED REMSEN BISHOP.

"Earth and sea-wind and sea,
And stars and sunlight be
Alike all prosperous for her, and all hours
Have all one heart, and all that heart as ours."

Mildred has two ambitions: To go to college, and to be a good horse-woman. We hope she will neither fail nor fall off.

ETHEL B. BROMLEY.

REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"Rosebud set with little, wilful thorns,
And sweet as English air could make her, she."

Ethel excels in all noble qualities. She has a lovable disposition, a sweet and ready tact, and is ever willing to give good counsel to her many friends.

In addition to this, Ethel reads extensively, and is talented in music. She is a proficient scholar in literature, as well as in her other studies. In all, Ethel has an enviable knowledge in many branches.

ISABEL BROTHERTON.

REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"She hath a nimble wit."

Isabel is a bright, promising scholar, quick at repartee, and possessing a great store of originality. She will probably follow the brilliant career of her mother. She has won our hearts by the generous distribution of her excellent fudge.

PEARL BECKWITH.

She walks "attended
By a strong siding champion, Conscience."

Pearl is a very bright and conscientious pupil, and is quite a favorite with the teachers and scholars. She has a bright, sympathetic face that makes those who know her love her, and those who do not know her long to make her acquaintance. One could never couple the thoughts of deceit and untruth with Pearl, for they are as far below her as the earth is below the sun.

HELEN BROWN.

"Her voice—'twas like the stealing of a summer wind through some wreathed shell."

Helen is one of the charming and talented maids of which the graduation class may boast. She is ever the same sweet girl, clever, jolly, and bright. Next year will, no doubt, find her hard at work with the vocal instructor, whose pride she has already become.

ROBERT CALDWELL, A K  $\Phi$ ;  $\Delta$  A  $\Phi$ .

CAPTAIN, BASE-BALL TEAM; ATHLETIC COUNCIL; FOOT-BALL TEAM.

"A youth to whom was given
So much of earth, so much of heaven,
And such impetuous blood."

"Mickey" is a handsome lad, which makes him a favorite with the gentler element. He is a conscientious fellow, and we all feel sure that he will make his mark in the world. He will pursue his studies at Cornell.

LILLIAN COOK.

"There's little of the melancholy in her."

Lillian's good nature and love of fun make her popular with her classmates. It does one good to tell her a joke, because she always sees the point. She is naturally bright, and always knows her lessons.

RALPH CUMMINS.

DEBATING CLUB; REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"I never knew so young a body with so old a head."

"Berry" is one of our best orators, and an indefatigable worker in the Debating Club. He enters into everything with a will, and keeps his shoulders to the wheel until the work is finished. His cheerful smile and ready laugh are indicative of a genial nature.

ANNA CURRAN.

"Of an excellent and unmatched wit and judgment."

Ann has made herself very popular by her never-failing fund of good nature and wit. She is a jolly, good girl, and takes an active part in all our class affairs.

JULIUS J. COHN, A. Φ.

DEBATING CLUB; ASSISTANT EDITOR, "THE GLEAM;" REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"I have too deeply read mankind to be amused by folly."

"Cæsar" is a first-class student, and devotes much of his time to the study of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. His work as assistant editor of The Gleam attracted much favorable comment. Though he has a great fondness for Cincinnati, his native city is Chattanooga.

ELLA DAVIS.

REMEMBRANCER STAFF; GLEAM STAFF.

"Her air, her manners, all who saw admired;
Courteous, 'though coy, gentle, 'though retired."

Ella, as long as her schoolmates are able to recall, has always been a good student and enthusiastic worker. The calm way in which she conducts herself is only one of her numerous fine characteristics. She probably will continue her schooling at the University.

FLORA DAVIS.

"I have lived in pleasant thought,
As if life's business were a summer's mood."

Flora possesses the happy faculty of always taking an optimistic view of everything. Her irrepressible merriment makes her welcome among her classmates, and they are many who enjoy her loyal friendship.

JAMES DAUGHERTY, A Φ.

TRACK TEAM; BASKET-BALL TEAM; GYM TEAM.

"He hath, indeed, bettered expectation."

Ever since his entrance into the school, Jim has taken an active and prominent part in athletics. He carried off several first prizes in his Sophomore year. If a few more of our athletes would train as conscientiously as he, Walnut Hills would have a track team to boast of.

ETHEL DAVIS.

"Her very frowns are fairer far
Than smiles of other maidens are."

Ethel has been a conscientious student during her High School days. She does excellent work in the drawing-room. She is an enthusiastic spectator at the Athletic Carnivals, and the field days. She is usually found at the social affairs of the class.

AMY DANKS.

"The glory of a firm, capacious mind."

Amy possesses such a mind as is proven by her excellent work as a student. Her congenial and engaging manners have won for her the friendship and esteem of all those who have the good fortune to know her.

YVONNE DUVAL.

"Her softer charms but by their influence known,
Surprise all hearts, and mold them to her own."

Yvonne has a sweet and reserved disposition, which, during her four years at W. H. H. S., has gained for her many friends. She is especially interested in the study of French. May her future be a bright one.

HANNA DINE.

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife."

Hanna takes great delight in delving into the depths of her studies at school. She reaps the benefit of her labors. But this is not the only side to Hanna's versatile nature. She is just as successful in always being amiable, lovable, and cheerful, as she is in studying a Greek lesson.

FRANCES DRABNER.

"She smiles, and smiles, and will not sigh."

Frances is noted for her jolly little giggle and her knowledge of German. She has made very many friends during her four years at High School.

BESSIE DREIFUS.

GLEAM STAFF.

"Thus bold, independent, unconquered one.

Her bright course of glory forever will run."

Bess is universally known for her cheerful manner and pleasant remarks. Whatever task she undertakes is sure never to be left undone. Besides this, she is one of the girls who can always maintain her rights.

MARIE ENGEL, Δ K.

"The mildest manners, and the gentlest heart."

All will agree that Marie is one of the dearest little girls in the Class of '04. She is a jolly member of the Delta Kappa sorority, and is a source of enlivenment at all its meetings. Her sweet smile and her gentle manners have made her loved by all her schoolmates.

GRACE EVANS, T. M. P.

"And she is fair, and fairer than that word,
Of wondrous virtues."

Grace is, without doubt, one of the prettiest and wittiest of our "sweet girl graduates." The perfect charm of her lovely disposition will linger as a beautiful fragrance in the hearts of her classmates when our school days have become a memory.

IRENE EPPINGER.

"Thy smiles become thee well."

Whenever we feel "blue" we immediately seek Irene's sunny presence and the world becomes bright again. Her characteristic little giggle and her exuberance of spirit win the hearts of all who know her. The charm of her conversation and the soundness of her judgment are pleasing evidences of an enviable mind. Irene is a talented pianist.

CLIFF C. W. FELS, X Σ X.

MANAGER, GYM TEAM.

"And the muscles of his brawny arms were strong as iron bands."

"Peter" is known by "the smile that won't come off." He is a thorough gymnast, and has been closely allied to the Gym Team during his four years in High School. He is a hard-working student and a clever conversationalist in French.

HATTIE FERREE.

"Flowers laugh before thee in their beds,
And fragrance in thy footing treads."

In the course of Hattie's life there never will be a time when she will lack friends and companions. Her sweet and bright disposition makes this an assured and pleasant fact. She has a merry smile and pleasant word for her schoolmates at all times, and the best wish we can give to her is that she may always continue to be her bright and happy self throughout life.

HART B. FYE.

"Of surprising beauty, and in the bloom of youth."

Hart is one of the popular fellows of the class. He has succeeded, after great exertion on his part, in breaking himself of the habit of reporting for roll-call in Room 1. He has a wonderful voice, having proven his singing powers on several occasions. The musical world will surely hear of him in the years to come.

AGNES FERRIS.

"A fair exterior is a silent recommendation."

Always smiling, always happy, Agnes is beloved by everyone. Though quite dignified, she is far from quiet, and even a Greek test cannot quell her gay spirits. Her classmates will always remember her as one of the belles of the class.

FRANK FREET.

SCHOOL ORCHESTRA.

"And though that he was worthy, he was wys."

"Chicken Wing" is a youthful prodigy. Indeed, he is the youngest person in the class, but notwithstanding this, he has always held his head high in his studies. He is a Spanish scholar, and as an elocutionist he has distinguished himself on several occasions. He was one of the honored three who read before the poet, Coates Kinney.

HELEN FEINKNOPF.

"The little, nameless acts
Of kindness and of love."

Helen is, by common consent, a most generous and kind-hearted girl. Should anyone be in trouble, Helen is ever ready to offer her assistance. The many little favors she has done for her classmates will live long in their memories.

FRANCES FINNIGAN, Δ K.

REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"Her deep blue eyes smile constantly,
As if they had by fitness
Won the secret of a happy dream."

Frances, or Maimie, as she is better known by her classmates, is a girl of noble character, enviable disposition, and broad-mindedness. As she has all these fine traits, it is needless to say that she is greatly admired by all who know her.

W. ALVA FORSHEE,  $\Delta K \Phi$ ;  $A K \Phi$ .

FOOT-BALL TEAM; MANAGER AND MEMBER BASE-BALL TEAM; CAPTAIN, GYM TEAM; ATHLETIC COUNCIL.

"He will guide his affairs with discretion."

Al. is a sterling fellow in many ways, and has won the respect of every one. As a gymnast and athlete, he ranks among the first. He is a good student, and somewhat of an artist. He will join the Walnut Hills Colony at the Varsity next year.

EDITH FICKE.

"As full of spirit as the month of May."

A "jolly, dear little girl" is the verdict of all who know Edith. She is not only pretty and winning, but she is a talented pianist and a faithful student.

MARIE FRIEHMELT.

"As upright as the cedar."

The enviable combination of a well-trained mind with a charming personality is found in Marie. She is an excellent student, and there are many who have learned the inestimable value of her sincere friendship.

ELSE A. FUHRMAN.

"One ounce of mirth is worth a thousand-weight of melancholy."

For her exceptional wit and hearty good nature, Else has won the affection of the class. Her sense of the humorous and her original remarks are sources of great amusement. It would be difficult to find a stauncher friend or a more congenial companion.

MURRAY GOLDSMITH.

DEBATING CLUB.

The motto of the College Class has ever been, "If you do not know your lessons, go to Goldsmith." As a student "Pat" has no equal. He was a member of the victorious debating teams of 1903 and 1904, and has proven himself an adept at public speaking. He has had great success in the literary field. When "Pat" is armed with a pen, beware! beware!

EDA MAE GARMORE.

"Grace was in all her steps, Heaven in her eye."

Jolly Mae is a great favorite with her classmates. A keen sense of humor and a sweet womanly demeanor combine to make her a welcome companion everywhere.

FRANK GOODALE.

"More is thy due than more than all can pay."

Frank is one of the few fellows who can take a joke with as much good nature as in playing one. Besides possessing fine social traits, he is a remarkable gymnast, having many good turns on the horizontal bar, and having done many stunts with the dumb-bells.

GARNETTE R. GILL.

REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"Energy and persistence conquer all things."

Garnette is one of the youngest members of our class. The fact that she has completed the course in three years is due to her never-failing perseverance. Her talent as a poetess is very marked, and we have derived much pleasure from it. Garnette is a modest, reserved girl, and a loyal friend.

AMELIA GEIGERMAN.

"Sincerity dwells in thy earnest eyes."

Amelia is one of our promising elocutionists. Her kindly disposition and even temper have won for her many friends, who wish that she may reach the goal of her ambition.

PEARL GROSS.

"And true she is, as she hath prov'd herself."

Pearl is a quiet, earnest, faithful student. She believes in perseverance. Would that we could find more such rare "pearls."

CLIFFORD GROSS.

"A gentleman of learning, and a most rare speaker."

For a long time it was exceedingly doubtful as to what Cliff. would be, but the Oratorical Contest dispelled all doubts from our minds. He will be an orator. The world shall hear of him from the rostrum. Let us hope that his fame may reach to the ends of the earth, and that Walnut Hills will be honored in being his Alma Mater.

EMMA GUETHLINE.

"Earnest application is the price to be paid for mental acquisition."

We can not say too much in praise of Emma's brain power. She has had a very brilliant career at this school, and, although she is very conscientious, she takes great delight in a good joke, in which she indulges quite frequently.

WILLIAM VON DER HALBEN.

VICE-PRESIDENT, DEBATING CLUB; REMEMBRANCE STAFF.

"He was a man, take him for all in all;
I shall not look upon his like again."

The "Count's" unfailing good nature, his bright, cheery smile, and his constant willingness to help his fellow-students, combine to make him one of the best-liked members of the class. He is not afraid of hard work, and his work in German is unequalled.

RUTH HAMILTON, Δ X; T. M. P.

"So sweet a face,
Such angel grace,
In all the land had never been."

Ruth, or "the girl who wins the prizes," is one of the liveliest of the Tramps, and brightens their meetings with her charming songs and witty conversation. "So gracious was her tact and tenderness" that she has a host of friends in school, and has taken an active part in all its functions. Ruth will be a member of the Walnut Hills Colony in Burnet Woods next year.

THURZA HOLDEN.

"A heart at leisure from itself,
To soothe and sympathize."

Thurza is quite a favorite among her schoolmates. She has a kindly smile for everyone. Whenever she is around everything is bright and pleasant, and it would be difficult to find a more generous and lovable girl than Thurza has proven herself to be.

ALMA HEHEMAN.

"Wise to resolve, and patient to perform."

An excellent scholar, Alma is particularly proficient in French. She is successful in whatever she undertakes, and is at all times earnest and painstaking. A sweet disposition is her great charm, and she is one of those who will cause our parting to be a matter of regret.

ALMA HILB.

"Her words are truly heralds of her mind."

No more true and sincere girl can be found in all the class than Alma. She is ever ready to bestow a smile on all. Her many friends in the Class of '04 wish her happiness and success.

GUSTAV A. HARF.

DEBATING CLUB.

"Night after night
He sat and bleared his eyes with books."

Doc is a quiet, studious fellow. Though seldom seen at any of the class entertainments, he manages to have his full share of fun. He has established a reputation for generosity, and is especially popular on composition days, when he usually has an abundant supply of pens.

WINIFRED HYDE.

"Few things are impossible to diligence and skill."

Winifred is certainly one of our most faithful and eager students. Her search after knowledge is earnest, and we predict a bright future for her. Her ability as a French scholar and as an actress was displayed in the French play, in which she achieved marked success.

RUFUS B. HALL, X Σ X.

DEBATING CLUB; GLEAM STAFF; MANAGER, SCHOOL ORCHESTRA;
SECRETARY CLASS.

"See what a grace is seated on his brow."

A Greek and Latin scholar, an enthusiastic member of the Debating Club, and a society man, as well, his influence has long been felt in the Class of 1904. His honesty is one of his strongest characteristics, and the boys feel that Rufus can be "counted on" under all circumstances.

CHARLES M. JONES, K Δ Σ.

FIRST LIEUTENANT, CADETS.

"For every man has business and desire, such as it is."

The call of the "wild" is strong in Chat, and he will soon betake himself to the "wild and woolly West," where he will pass his time killing Indians, finding gold mines, rounding up cattle, etc. Chat was very popular among both the boys and the girls, and his departure will, doubtless, occasion much regret.

DORA KLEIN.

"Lulled with sound of sweetest melody."

Our class is noted for its musicians. Dora is one of them. Music is as natural to her as breathing. We sincerely believe that she will make a mark in the musical world some day.

JEANNETTE KAHN.

REMEMBRANCE STAFF.

"Her high, broad forehead, marble fair,
Told of the power of thought within."

"Jean" is one of the merry maids of the Greek Class, and, by her strength of character and lovable nature, she has endered herself to all her classmates. As everyone knows, she is ever ready to "join in" for a jolly good time. She will attend the Varsity.

HILDA KNOST.

"Those about her
From her shall read the perfect ways of honor."

We also might learn with profit to emulate Hilda's example in the great diligence with which she pursues her studies. Her genuine sympathy and sweetness of disposition are captivating characteristics that endear her to every one. May she ever enjoy bountiful good fortune.

EDWARD M. KRUCKEMEYER,

DEBATING CLUB; REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"Oh, he is a jolly good fellow."

Ed is extremely fond of drawing cartoons. Every available space in his text-books is covered with them. He will, no doubt, assist some paper, as the Chicago American, in efforts to amuse the world, in years to come. We predict a brilliant future for him.

LENORE KLOPP.

"Speak the speech, I pray you, trippingly on the tongue."

Lenore is a girl who is fond of fun. She is very good-natured. She does excellent work in elocution, and will graduate from the Flowers-Schuster Dramatic School next year.

ROBERT W. KASTING.

"All we ask is to be let alone."

Rob is a quiet gentleman who goes about his work without bothering anybody, yet he always does it well. He has been little heard of in social affairs, but he has won laurels for himself in the class-room. We predict a prosperous future for him, and wish him success.

BELLE KLAUSMEYER.

"A maiden never bold,
Of spirit so still and quiet."

Belle's quiet, pleasing manner is only one of her many admirable qualities. Sincerity and loyalty characterize her sentiments toward her school and her friends, and we hope the future will bring her happiness and success.

FLORENCE LOEB.

"A day in April never came so sweet."

Florence is a member of the College Class, and is a diligent and successful student. She is greatly admired by all for her quiet, unassuming manners, and our best wishes will follow her to the University next year.

BELLE LINDSEY.

"She seemed as happy as a wave that dances on the sea."

Belle is noted for her vivacity and quick repartee, under which is concealed a warm, impulsive heart. She always looks on the joyful side of life, and brings merriment with her into all social gatherings.

GRANVILLE S. LAURENCE.

"A pleasant man of gentle voice."

Yes, he certainly is a pleasant fellow, and his genial qualities have won him many friends. He is an ardent supporter of athletics, and seldom, if ever, has he missed a contest in which the Crimson and Silver were represented.

GRACE LINDEMAN.

"A sweet, heart-lifting cheerfulness,
Like Spring-time of the year,
Seem'd ever on her step to wait."

Grace's quiet and gentle disposition wins friends for her wherever she goes. Though she is a conscientious student, she has not permitted her work to interfere with her social pleasures. She has a rare fondness for art, and in many of her study bells she may be found diligently at work in the drawing room.

AMY LOTHMAN, Δ K.

VICE-PRESIDENT.

"A grander girl I yet have never seen."

Amy's amiable disposition and sterling character have won for her many friends. She is Vice-President of the grade, and a member of the Δ K,—sufficient evidences of her popularity. She is a good student, and will probably attend the 'Varsity next year.

HELENA LOTZE, T. M. P.

"Gentle of speech, beneficent of mind."

Helena has delighted her sister Tramps by the exercise of her artistic proclivities. Her cheerful disposition and pleasant ways have made her friendship desired by all. She will be an ardent student at the Varsity, where we hope her career will be as successful as it promises to be.

MILLARD D. LOWENSTEIN, A Φ

DEBATING CLUB; GLEAM STAFF.

"And certainly he was a gude felawe."

"Fatty," although carrying much weight, nevertheless manages to get around fairly well. He is a fine French scholar, and took a prominent part in the French play, "Le Letter Chargee."

MADISON C. B. MASON, JR.

DEBATING CLUB.

"He is a minister's son."

Mason is a debator and orator of no mean ability. He was Captain of the victorious Debating Team of 1904, and it is indirectly due to his efforts that we won. We feel sure that he will reflect credit upon his Alma Mater in later years. He will continue his studies at Harvard.

WINONA MASON.

"Not only has she music in her soul,
But at her finger tips."

The A Grade girls will always remember how quickly and pleasantly the Gymnasium hour passed, due to the kindness of Winona, who played the piano for us. Not only is she a proficient musician, but her oratorical talent is evident. Winona will attend the Emerson School of Oratory, where we hope she will be as successful in her work and as highly esteemed as she has ever been at Walnut Hills High School.

THOMAS J. McROBERTS, JR.

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast,
To soften rocks, or bend the knotted oak."

"Mack" is a fine performer on the piano. Besides having musical talent, he is a good student. He will enter the Class of 1908 at Harvard. We predict a great future for him.

EDGAR MIHALOVITCH.

GLEAM STAFF; FOOT-BALL TEAM.

"Shake not thy (curly) locks at me."

The girls all say that "Kinky" is "all right." What more could be said of him? He is a good scholar, whenever inclined that way. One of the best-liked fellows in the class, he is always in for a good time, and always knows how to have one.

BLANCHE MEIS,  $\Delta K$ .

TREASURER, CLASS OF '04.

"Such harmony is in immortal souls."

Blanche is one of the most popular girls in the school and of the Delta Kappa Sorority. Due to her true and amiable character, she has made a host of friends. Though she is fond of social functions, she never enjoys them at the expense of her studies.

WALTER MARCKWORTH,  $\Delta A \Phi$ .

FOOT-BALL TEAM.

"At sight of thee, my gloomy soul cheers up."

"Dutch" is a very merry fellow, and he has helped to make our literature lessons more enjoyable. He is a good student (when he is at school), and a foot-ball player of note. He makes his genial presence felt at all social affairs.

VANCE K. MILLER.

"Upon his brow, shame is ashamed to sit."

Vance is one of the most esteemed fellows in the class. He is respected by all, because of his sterling worth and true sense of manhood. It seems that Vance's interests are all centered in Covington. He holds the championship of the school in tennis.

FLOSSIE McERLAIN.

"Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood."

Anyone who has the good fortune to know Flossie will not doubt her generosity of spirit. She is one of those girls whom our A Grade can always feel proud to have had with us. Flossie has made many friends during her four years at High School, which is a natural result of her captivating ways and sweet disposition.

PEARL MAY.

"She was most beautiful to see."

Pearl is one of the sweetest and most popular of our classmates, with an exceedingly frank and pleasing disposition. She has made herself very prominent by her talent in elocution, and will continue her studies in that line at some local school of expression.

ADA MCGLOUGHLIN.

"'Tis easy enough to be pleasant,
When life goes by like a song;
But the girl that's worth while
Is the girl with a smile,
When everything goes dead wrong."

Ada is this girl without the slightest doubt, and her happy-go-lucky disposition has made her school days most pleasant. Her sweet smile, which she bestows on all alike, is appreciated by her classmates, all of whom hope that her future shall be as bright and happy as her school life has been.

SADIE MURPHY.

"It is tranquil people who accomplish much."

It would take a good-sized volume to tell all the nice things Sadie's friends say about her. She is industrious, and always ready to help any of her less studious friends.

FREDA MORITZ.

"Winning grace, her every act refined,
Like sunshine shedding beauty where it fell."

Freda is one of the sweetest girls of the graduates of '04. Everyone is charmed by her sweet ways and refined manner. She will be greatly missed by her large number of friends upon graduating from the school. Next year she will probably attend the University.

LORETTO MORLEY.

"A heart that warmly seems to feel."

Loretto is endowed with the gift of a ready sympathy that is a source of pleasure to her friends, of whom there are many in the class. A charming conversationalist and graceful dancer, hers is a welcome presence at the social affairs.

HARRY MITCHELL, X Σ X.

DEBATING CLUB; REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"You would have thought the very windows spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old
Thro' casement darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage."

Yes, Harry is quite popular. He is a student, too—a lover of good books. We surmise that he wishes to become a lawyer. He has the brains and energy to become a great Solon. We congratulate him on happy prospects.

EDITH MORRISON.

"Fair girl, by whose simplicity my spirit has been won."

Edith, "the girl with the blue ribbon," as her friends have termed her, is one of the bright, interesting girls of the College Class, and is admired and liked by all. No doubt she will journey together with many of us to the University "over the way."

LESLIE MORELL.

"And when a lady's in the case,
You know all other things give place."

Leslie is a great admirer of the ladies. His redeeming feature is the possession of the "smile that won't come off." He is as popular with the fellows as he is esteemed by the ladies.

HARRY NIEHOFF.

BASE-BALL TEAM.

"Give me a man that is not passion's slave."

"Whitey" was universally liked by the boys. His standing amongst the girls is unknown, for, although he admires the young ladies, he is content to worship from afar. Most of his spare time is passed in teasing Sohn, sometimes with disastrous results. He is going to reform and go to work.

LOTTIE OBENDORFER.

"One of the few, the immortal names, that were not born to die."

Lottie has, indeed, made a name for herself in mathematics, as well as in literature, and there are very few difficult problems in either that are beyond her comprehension. But to those who know her this is a secondary consideration, for her sweetness of disposition and captivating little giggle endear her to all those who are fortunate enough to call her friend.

CLAUDIA OPPENHEIMER.

"O Music! sphere-descended maid,
Friend of Pleasure, Wisdom's aid!"

Claudia takes life as she finds it. She does not think that worrying over things will make them any better, and she believes that to-morrow will take care of itself. Claudia has a sweet, gentle manner that makes all the girls her friends, and we expect to hear of her becoming quite famous in the musical world.

A. EDWARD C. OTTE, JR., X Σ X.

"Time, place, and action may with pains be wrought,
But genius must be born, and never can be taught."

Ed certainly has genius—genius that has been strongly felt in all class matters. Business-like, manly, and having a truly noble character, he possesses at the same time the charming trait of a Beau Brummel. We may well say that anything with which he is connected is sure to be a decided success.

BESSIE O'BARR, T. M. P.

EDITOR REMEMBRANCER.

"What she wills to do or say,
Is wisest, virtuousest, discreetest, best."

Bess is the girl to whom one would go for good, sound advice. The frankness with which she always speaks, and the enthusiasm with which she always enters into a task of whatever nature it may be, have won for her a host of admirers. As a manager of social or business affairs she is unsurpassed. She is our fair representative of the "Sunny South."

RALPH E. OESPER, K Δ Σ.

GLEAM STAFF; FOOT-BALL TEAM; REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion."

"Kid" is one of the best students of our class, and no doubt he will some day be a noted professor. Being exchange editor of The Gleam, he is one of the worst "knockers" in the school, for he "knocks" all other school papers. The Varsity will be honored by his presence next year.

RICHARD J. PAULSEN, JR.

DIRECTOR, SCHOOL ORCHESTRA; CAPTAIN CADETS.

"Next the soldier, bearded like the pard."

Dick is a true son of Mars, but in the midst of his worship of the God of War he has still found time to pay his respects to Apollo. He has divided his attention between the cadets and the orchestra, and has been highly successful in both undertakings. He will enter West Point next Fall, from which place he will doubtless graduate with high honors.

VIOLA E. PFAFF, Δ K.

"I am more than common tall."

Viola is all that is noble in woman. A good friend and a splendid scholar, she is one of the most esteemed girls in the class. She is a fine linguist and pianist, and as the star of the French play she was a brilliant success. Upon the occasion of Colonel Kinney's visit to our school Viola's recitation of one of his famous poems was a pleasing evidence of her elocutionary talent.

MARY PERKINS, Δ X; T. M. P.

REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"A countenance in which did meet
Sweet records, promises as sweet."

Mary is a prominent member of the College Class. She possesses, besides her admirable intellectual attainments, a winning personality, which has endeared her to all her classmates, and has made her a delightful comrade. Next year will find her at the 'Varsity.

FREDERICK POOLE.

GYM TEAM.

"An honest man, close buttoned to the chin, Broadcloth without, and a warm heart within."

"Fritz" is one of the most quiet and retiring fellows of the class. A deep delver into the mysteries of chemistry, he is also a fine performer on the banjo. He spends most of his spare time in reading and research.

FLORENCE DONBEY PRATHER, Δ X; T. M. P.

"And shall we say the sun is bright,
Nor grant that claim to thee?"

Florence is greatly loved by all who know her for her sweet manners and gentle ways. She is a remarkably clever and earnest student, and will continue her successful career at Vassar next year. The best wishes of her numerous friends will attend her.

MABEL PRATT.

"Her mind doth shape itself to its own wants, and can bear all things."

Mabel, who is endowed with that rare gift, a brilliant mind, has made her school career a great success. She is a lovely girl, with a pleasant disposition, and has won the esteem and love of her classmates.

LEILA J. RAMSFELDER.

REMEMBRANCER STAFF; GLEAM STAFF.

"Accomplishments were native to her mind,
Like precious pearls within a clasping shell."

"Leil" is a charming girl in every sense of the word. She is highly talented in both music and elocution, and has won great credit for herself while on The Gleam staff. These accomplishments, with a lovable disposition and beautiful character, have made her one of the most popular girls of the class.

ALMA RASCH, Δ K.

"Her eyes are bright, and her face is fair,
She is gifted with jet-black hair."

Her name belies her, for there certainly is nothing "rash" about Alma. She has that which many of us lack, the power to think before she acts. As would be expected of a Δ K girl, she is very popular.

ESTELLA RENDIGS.

"Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace."

Estella is one of those sweet girls whom everyone likes. One of her most charming characteristics is her loyalty to her friends and school-mates. But few school socials have taken place at which Estella has not been present.

WILLIAM RIEKER.

"He was gentle, mild, and virtuous."

"Buddie" is one of the best fellows in the class. As a student he ranks above the average, and he shines particularly bright in mathematics. Social affairs have furnished but little attraction for him, but the loss will, no doubt, be repaid in coming years. He will study medicine at Ohio Medical College next year.

EMMA RICHARDSON.

GIRLS GYM TEAM.

"Devoted, anxious, generous, void of guile,
And with her whole heart's welcome in her smile."

Emma, one of the truest and sincerest of girls, is exceedingly popular with all her classmates. Always smiling, she seems to look on only the bright side of life. We trust her faith in this world's good will ne'er be shaken.

HELEN ROTHKOPF.

"A justice, a sweetness, a meekness of mind."

Helen is an excellent scholar, but is especially proficient in mathematics. She has been with us only two years, but in that time she has made many friends, who will follow her apparently brilliant career with interest and pride.

NORINE ROGERS, T. M. P.

"Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle and low: an excellent thing in woman."

Although Norine has not been a member of our class throughout the four years, by her sweet manner and many charms she has won for herself friends without number, and she is considered one of the most popular girls of '04.

EDWARD D. ROWE, A K Φ; Δ A Φ.

PRESIDENT, ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION; MANAGER AND MEMBER, FOOT-BALL TEAM; TRACK TEAM; BASE-BALL TEAM.

"Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere."

Ted is one of the best-natured fellows in the class. As a foot-ball player he is "all wool and a yard wide." It is said that the girls are afraid of him on account of his immense size. He will make a welcome addition to the University of Cincinnati's foot-ball squad next Fall.

FLORENCE ROSIN.

"She speaks, behaves, and acts just as she ought."

Florence is one of our most faithful and successful students. She is quiet and reserved, and has won the favor of the teachers, as well as pupils, who are attracted by her admirable qualities.

REGINA ROTHCHILD, Δ K.

"Heart on her lips, and soul within her eyes."

Jean's frankness and sincerity combined with her pleasant disposition, have made her course at High School a happy one. Those who have the good fortune to be numbered among her friends value her friendship highly, and know that she can be depended upon at all times. She will be enrolled at Vassar next year.

WALTER SILVERMAN, A K Φ.

FOOT-BALL TEAM; TRACK TEAM.

"Merriment shone from his eyes."

Wallie wears a perpetual smile. As a student and track athlete he stands in the very first rank. His faithfulness to his class and his loyalty to his school are worthy of honorable mention.

FLORENCE KATHERINE SCHAAF, Δ X; T. M. P.

"She was a phantom of delight,
When first she gleamed upon my sight."

Florence is one of the prettiest of Walnut Hills' pretty girls. Her cheerful smile has won for her much admiration throughout the class. She is one of those who are tramping up the heights of Mount Parnassus. She will probably continue her schooling at the U. of C. next year.

HERBERT SNODGRASS, A K  $\Phi$ ;  $\Delta$  A  $\Phi$ .

BASE-BALL TEAM.

"Noght a word spoke he more than was nede."

"Herb" believes in the old saying that "silence is golden," consequently he keeps out of trouble and has a lot of friends. He is one of our most brilliant mathematical students, and he occupies a prominent place in social affairs. The girls all like him.

JEANETTE SCHWAB.

"A thousand legends dwell in her beautiful black eyes."

Jeanette is a universal favorite. She has an exceeding frank and pleasing disposition, which has won her many friends. She is a clever conversationalist, and is very proficient in the use of her pen. Next year she will be a student at the 'Varsity.

EDA MAE SILVERMAN.

CLASS ORATOR.

"A little of thy merriment,
Of thy sparkling, light content."

Eda Mae verily possesses "the smile that won't come off." She always looks on the bright side of things. Her agreeable nature and radiant eyes help to make the world seem brighter to her classmates. Her jollity, however, never interferes with her studies, to which she is very faithful. She has made most progress in her favorite subjects—Latin and elocution—which she intends to continue next year.

MARGUERITE STEWART.

"Oh! that's the queen of womankind,
And ne'er a one to peer her."

Her name suggests a noted family in England famous for its Queens. And, indeed, Marguerite is very much like a Queen, both in respect to her personal appearance and to her lovable disposition.

ERWIN SOHN.

"As I perchance shall think it meet to put an antic disposition on."

Our class without the "Major" would have been like a circus without a clown. His childish action, his little witticisms, his faulty use of big words and the unfailing good nature with which he has ever received the chafing of his classmates will keep his memory green for many a year. He will continue his studies at 'Varsity.

GERTRUDE B. SPIEGEL, Δ K.

"You may travel and travel many a mile,
But ne'er will you find so winsome a smile."

Gertie is a "leader" among the girls. She is not only loved by her Δ K sisters, but by all who know her. She is very popular, as is shown by the fact that she is a member of several sororities at school. Her education will be continued at the 'Varsity.

ELDRIDGE SMITH, A K  $\Phi$ ;  $\Delta$  A  $\Phi$ .

TRACK TEAM.

"He was among the prime in worth."

El. is the crack sprinter of the school. He is never troubled with the questions of the day, but always attends class socials. He is a solid fellow, and is well liked by all the rest of the class. We predict that he will win his "C" in his Freshman year at the 'Varsity.

AMOS E. W. STUEVE, K  $\Delta$   $\Sigma$ .

EDITOR, "THE GLEAM;" ASSISTANT EDITOR, "THE REMEMBRANCER;" CAPTAIN AND ADJUTANT, CADETS; SECRETARY, DEBATING CLUB; PRESIDENT, KAPPA DELTA SIGMA; FOOT-BALL TEAM; TRACK TEAM; SCHOOL ORCHESTRA; MANAGER, BASKET-BALL TEAM.

"In what particular thought to work, I know not."

Owing to the limitations of our space, it will be impossible for us to expatiate on all of "Bowler's" good qualities. Under his guidance The Gleam has had the most prosperous year of its existence. As center on the Foot-ball Team, he was without a peer in this section of the country. He also shone in track athletics, and we will find him studying medicine at Miami Medical College next Fall.

GOLDIE TERRELL.

"Her eyes do shine like diamonds."

In this case Goldie's name signifies nothing in regard to her appearance. She is a decided brunette. She has made herself famous in the A Grade for her delicious fudge. But do not think that Goldie's capabilities be only in this line. She is attractive, sweet, and has a sound judgment.

ETHEL TRAGER.

"She is as constant as the stars that never vary."

Ethel is gifted with that great virtue, "sincerity." On account of this, her sweet disposition and strong character, she is held in the highest esteem by all who know her. She has done good work during her four years of High School life, and will probably be found at the Cincinnati University next year.

ROBERT TAYLOR,  $\Delta A \Phi$ .

PRESIDENT, DELTA ALPHA PHI; DIRECTOR, MANDOLIN CLUB; SECRETARY,
ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION; MANAGER, TRACK TEAM.

"To thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not be false to any man."

Bob certainly is one of the truest fellows in the class. Reliability is one of his strongest points. A good student, a track athlete of no mean ability, and a man of society, he has always time to devote to his many friends.

MARGARET VINCENT,  $\Delta X$ ; T. M. P.

"A daughter of the gods,
Divinely tall, and most divinely fair."

Margaret is one of the jolliest and most popular of the Tramps. She also has the distinction of being their President. Her spicy conversation and vivacity of manner enliven all our social affairs. Next year she will be a general favorite at the University.

ALICE VON PEIN.

"Her merry laugh was music to the ear."

A jollier girl than Alice has never graduated from High School. When she laughs everyone laughs with her. An excellent student, her standing in mathematics has been equalled by few, and her classmates are proud of her.

MAX W. WEIL.

"In small proportions, we just beauties see."

Max is a prodigy. Besides being an all-around sociable fellow, he is a mathematician of note. He is bound to make a success in coming years.

MARGARET WARNER.

"Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul."

Margaret is a conscientious student. She is highly esteemed as a friend, owing to her frankness and sincerity.

WILLIAM G. WOOD.

CAPTAIN TRACK TEAM; GYM TEAM; FOOT-BALL TEAM; GLEAM STAFF.

"For the apparel oft proclaims the man."

There is one thing with which Willie will always be associated—his success in athletics. As an athlete he is a star of the first magnitude, holding the Interscholastic Championship of Ohio in the weights. He will, in all probability, be found at the Miami University next year.

LAVONA WATSON.

REMEMBRANCER STAFF.

"Not speaking much, pleased with the joy of her own thoughts."

Lavona has won the love and respect of all the girls by her kind, cheerful and obliging disposition. She is as true to her studies as she is to her friends, having especially distinguished herself for her good work in literature, which she will probably continue together with other subjects at a higher institution of learning.

FREDERIC WEILER.

"And solitarie he was and evere alone."

Fred has devoted most of his time to his books, not caring to participate in many of the social affairs of the school. He is a thorough and conscientious student, and has a "bunch" of friends. Fred will, doubtless, climb high on the ladder of success.

HATTIE WILLIAMS.

"My crown is called content ;
A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy."

Hattie wastes no time. Every minute is used in adding to the store of knowledge her mind already possesses. She is a faithful student. Her perseverance and pleasant manners assure her a bright future.

LULU WHITLOW.

"A mind serene for contemplation."

Lulu is an excellent student, and the originality of some of her ideas is the evidence of an alert, observant mind. She will enter the Provident Hospital, Chicago, where she will study to become a trained nurse.

FRANK WHETSTONE, X Σ X.

"Laugh at your friends, and if your friends are sore,
So much the better, you may laugh the more."

"Grumpy" is quite a sportsman. His greatest pleasures are hunting and fishing. He spends a good deal of his spare time on the Miami River or in its vicinity, devoting the remainder of his leisure hours to the game of tennis. He is an energetic student of chemistry.

RENA WEILER.

"The hand that follows intellect, can achieve."

Rena is one of the few girls whose trend of mind is toward the scientific branches. She takes great delight in trying to fathom all the deeps of chemistry. But when there is a good joke told or a good time in view, Rena forgets her scientific pursuits and enjoys herself hugely.

DELLA WOODYARD.

"A face with gladness overspread,
Soft smiles by human kindness bred."

Della is, indeed, kind-hearted and true. Her gentle unassuming manner have endeared her to all, but we are aware that strength of character and noble principles are dominant traits in sweet Dolly's character. She possesses a petite beauty and a grace that is charming.

MARY WOOLLEY.

"As pure in thought as angels are,
To know her was to love her."

Mary is a girl who will live forever in the hearts of her classmates. She is devoted to her home and her studies, and she is quiet, modest, and industrious. We regret that she has participated so little in the social affairs of the school.

CLARA RUTH WEAKLEY.

"In every gesture, dignity and love."

Clara is a girl who must be known well to be appreciated, but her generosity and kindness is recognized by all. Next year she will attend the Woman's College in Baltimore.

AURELIA D. WEILER.

"She is fairer than words can say."

Aurelia, by her sweet smile and charming personality, has won for herself a large circle of friends among her classmates. She is found at all the social entertainments given by the school. Aurelia acquired great fame as a clever little actress, while with the Comedy Club.

EFFIE L. M. WISE.

"Of all the girls that e'er were seen,
There's none so fine as Effie."

We are sure that this must be the sentiment of many of Effie's friends. In girlish sweetness she is unsurpassed. She greets all alike with her pleasant smile, which never fades from her serene countenance. We hope that her path through life will be a bright one, with only happy tidings to greet her.

BESSIE YOUMANS.

Her looks did argue her replete with modesty."

Bessie is noted not only for her diligence and perseverance, but for her gentle and unassuming manners, which, it is needless to say, have won the favor of the teachers and the admiration of her classmates.

HENRIETTE MAY.

"Meek loveliness is round thee spread."

We are proud to number Henriette amongst the "sweet girl graduates" of the class of '04, for her charms have justly won much admiration. Her many warm friends in the class wish her unbounded happiness and success.

The Prodigal Son

IT was cold, intensely cold. The keen wind cut through the warmest wraps and chilled the blood in the veins. It was New-Year's Eve, and the streets of the city were alive with people. Everyone seemed happy and cheerful. Few thoughts were given that night to the poor, wretched denizens of the slums.

At the corner of the two most important streets stood a building, large and beautiful. A flood of yellow light streamed through the costly plate-glass and shone on the passing crowd with a hospitable radiance. In fancy letters over the door were the words, "The Golden Eagle." How pleasant and comfortable everything about the place seemed! In there, at least, one could be happy and at ease. But, ah! how many hearts were breaking, how many tears were falling, how many prayers were being uttered, that very night, all because some dear, loved one was within, throwing away his manhood and his happiness, for the poor pleasure of a drink from the flowing bowl!

The clocks all over the city were striking eight. The crowd passing in front of the "The Golden Eagle" was still large, but not so great as it had been an hour before. Presently a man, dressed in old and ragged clothes, came slowly up the street, and paused in front of the saloon. The light from the windows shone full upon him, and his features were clearly discernible. They were the features of a young man of about twenty-five years. His cheeks were pitifully haggard and pallid. His blue eyes had a drawn and hungry look, and he shivered as he drew his threadbare coat more closely about him. He was gazing at the door of the saloon. Should he go in? He had but little money with him, to be sure, but yet, he had enough to buy the means of making himself warm and comfortable. The light seemed brighter than ever; the longing for comfort and warmth grew stronger; a chill blast struck him—he gasped, shivered, and took a quick step forward.

As he did so, he came in collision with an old lady, dressed in deep black, and carrying a small package in one hand, while she endeavored to keep her shawl around her with the other. The package flew out of her hand and went spinning along the walk. The young man, blushing, hastened to pick up the package, and, with a murmured "Pardon me," placed it in the old lady's hand. She looked up, and with a sweet smile said: "Thank you; I do not think it is hurt." Then she passed on, and the young man leaned against the lamp-post. He could not go in now. Ah! what a flood of recollections the sight of that old lady had brought to him. He had been so happy with his widowed mother. He had been everything to her. He had been her darling, her pride, all she had to live for. He had enjoyed all the comforts his heart could wish in their pretty little home, and now, with pangs of conscience, he remembered those hours of holy delight, when he and his mother used to read the Bible together, his mother's arm around him, his mother's eyes looking into his, as he read from the good old Book.

And then had come that dreadful day, a year ago—he shuddered as he remembered it—a year ago that very night, when he had been persuaded, strongly against his will, to enter one of those outposts of Satan, called saloons. How he had gone from bad to worse after that; how his mother, with tears in her eyes, had begged him to keep away from the saloons. Oh! if he had only heeded her prayers! And then—that awful night, when, in a fit of drunken rage, he had sprung upon his former friend, and had stabbed him fiercely with a knife. He would never forget the awful feeling of remorse which had been his, when he saw the boy fall backward, bleeding, and, as he thought, fatally wounded.

And then he had fled. Fled into the dark night, from home, from mother, from everything—desiring only to escape the vague terror that was clutching at his heart. He had jumped onto an out-going train, hardly knowing what he was doing. Then, after many days, months it seemed to him, he had found himself in a strange city, hundreds of miles from home. Home! Oh! how he longed to go back, but he dared not. He might, indeed, escape the dreaded judgment of the law, but he could never look his mother in the face again. He could not meet his friends, after having killed a comrade. No; he would stay where he was. He could find work, perhaps, and live a life of solitude. He had found work, but it was a position which paid him barely enough to keep him in food and clothes. Shortly afterward he read in a newspaper, printed in his home city, the announcement of the recovery of the young man whom he thought he had killed. He had experienced a great feeling of joy and gladness when he read this; but still he could not make up his mind to go back. For ten long, weary months he labored, and then the yearning for home and mother grew so great that he could bear it no longer. Three weeks ago he had given up his position and returned home, walking more than half the way, because he had not money enough to pay his fare.

And now here he was once more in his native city. Could he, dare he, face his mother? As her sweet face, with the love shining in her eyes, came before him, he sobbed, and the tears gathered in his eyes, and rolled down his pale cheeks. Yes; he would go to her, beg her forgiveness, and tell her how he meant to live an honest, true, Christian life from now on. He knew she would forgive her boy, and take him to her heart once more. A wave of joy swept over him, as he hastened toward his old home. As he entered the gate, and gazed at the dear little cottage through a mist of tears, his heart beat almost to suffocation. He went up to the front door, and was just in the act of knocking, when his attention was attracted by a placard on the door: "Plain Sewing Done Here." A feeling of dark foreboding came over him, as he softly knocked.

A moment later the door opened, and a neat little maid stood before him. With trembling voice he asked, "Is Mrs. Leslie at home?"

"Mrs. Leslie?" replied the little maid in a perplexed voice. "Who—Oh, I guess you mean the old lady who used to live here before we rented the place. Why, she's been dead for more'n six months! Are you?"—but the young man was gone.

Dead! His dear old mother dead! Oh, if he had only known it sooner! What was there to live for now? Slowly and sadly he walked up the brightly-lighted street, wishing he could die, for that was the only way in which he could hope to meet his mother now.

* * * * *

"Hurry up, gran'pa; ma'mma'll be wondering what's become of us." The childish voice was clear and sweet, and more than one passer-by raised his head to look at the little, golden-haired, blue-eyed girl of six summers, grasping the hand of an elderly, white-haired gentleman, her "gran'pa." Presently they came to the crossing.

The little one, impatient at their slow progress, let go her hold on the old man's hand, and ran into the street. Suddenly there was a shout, a warning cry, the great crowd swayed as a forest in a mighty storm, and a pair of maddened horses dashed wildly up the street.

The cry of warning came too late. The child stood petrified with terror, staring at the approaching animals. On they came! Women shrieked and wrung their hands, while strong men covered their faces and groaned.

Suddenly a figure dashed from the crowd toward the child. Straight it sprang to the horses' heads. There was a mighty cheer, and men rushed to his aid. A moment later the figure was lying in a heap on the ground, and the horses, as if satisfied with the harm which they had already done, allowed themselves to be led quietly away. The frightened and trembling child was placed, unhurt, in her agonized grandfather's arms.

Then the men turned to her rescuer. He was very still and white. Tenderly they raised him, pityingly they gazed upon his pale face; but a smile was on his lips, a heavenly light seemed to envelope his features—the prodigal had returned to his home and to his mother.

GARNETTE R. GILL.

A Narrow Escape

SEVERAL years ago I had the pleasure of accompanying my father, a German-American journalist, on a trip to Missouri. After many pleasant experiences we arrived at the city of Mexico, where we met several old acquaintances of my father. Out in the prairie, about fourteen miles to the southeast of this city, a new country town had been established, consisting of the usual rudiments of a village, namely, a blacksmith shop, a church, a tavern, a general store, and a school, and serving as a business center or market-place for about one hundred German families living within a radius of thirty miles. This little place, called Benton City, my father concluded to visit, in the interest of the paper with which he was connected.

There being no road leading thither, he had to ride through the prairie on horseback. I was more than pleased when a friend of ours, a doctor, suggested that I should accompany my father, and proposed to place one of his horses, a steady old dappled gray, at my disposal. After some persuasion on my part, I obtained the consent of my parent to accept the gentleman's kind offer.

"If you ride forth to-morrow, Sunday morning, at five o'clock," said the doctor, "you will reach Benton by nine, when you will find all the farmers of the neighborhood either assembled in church or just leaving it."

The same evening my father procured a valuable bay thoroughbred from the livery stable of a certain Mr. Walsh, who, early the next morning, escorted us out of the city, and the great Missouri prairie lay before us. "Direct your horses to the southeast, and you will arrive at your destination at half-past eight!" shouted Mr. Walsh, and, waving his broad-brimmed hat, he galloped back to the city, leaving us to pursue our lonely path through the prairie.

It was the first time in my life that I had ever been on horseback, and in memory I still see my father as he gave me the general instructions in the art of riding, while our horses moved on with that characteristic slow gallop which prairie steeds habitually adopt in order to prevent their feet from becoming entangled in the high grass. Looking forth from my proud elevation, and feeling like a knight-errant, I could discern nothing but the high, variegated grass which, wave-like, bowed to the mild breeze. Inspired by the beauty of the morning, my father, a passionate vocalist, enlivened the journey by singing several German songs. Every now and then a frightened flock of prairie chickens or of quail flew up, causing us to regret that we had no fowlingpiece with us. Singing, chatting, and laughing, we rode on, unobservant of Mr. Walsh's parting words, while hour after hour elapsed. When nine o'clock arrived, no tree, no tower, no sign of a settlement was discernible, nothing but prairie, prairie, prairie.

As we proceeded onward, the sun, rising higher and higher in the firmament, momentarily increased the already parching heat. After half an hour we fortunately discovered a brooklet, where we watered our horses and also quenched our thirst with a refreshing draft of cool, sparkling liquid. Presently we descried a dark spot on the horizon, toward which we directed our horses, and arrived, about noon, at a fenced-in farm-yard, apparently desolated. A filthy weather-worn log cabin and a neglected shed were the only buildings on the premises. Ill-conditioned farming implements lay about in great confusion. Among these was a rusty pitchfork which especially attracted my attention, since no two of its four tines had equal length, or pointed in the same direction. A cumbersome, muddy farm-wagon stood at one side of the inclosure, near the tottering fence.

When, on our repeated hallooing, nobody appeared, we assumed that the occupants of the place had gone to church, and, hoping to buy a dinner of them on their return, we entered a half-open gate, in order to await their arrival, in the yard. After dismounting, we fastened our tired animals to the wheels of the old wagon, and I was just stooping to pick up some ears of corn which lay scattered about, intending to feed our four-footed companions, when suddenly we heard a loud, thunder-like voice: "What are you doin' there, stealin' my corn?" On turning about, we beheld a short, middle-aged personage, so sallow that I could not help recalling the words of Cæsar to his friend Antony:

"Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
such men are dangerous."

All thoughts of Antony were dissipated, however, by a closer survey of the face and figure of the uncouth individual before us. His features, far from being Roman, were most barbarously Celtic, as could be discovered by a moment's glance at his watery-blue eyes, his close-shorn red hair and beard, his prominent cheekbones and long upper lip. We were very unfavorably impressed by his complexion, which reflected all the colors of the rainbow. Before I was able to recover from the shock caused by the sudden appearance of the man, a shrill female voice, proceeding from the interior of the cabin, exclaimed: "Jesse McNulte, go for them there thieves, with your pitchfork!"

I trembled with fear, as I did not desire to have my entrails made acquainted with that rusty pitchfork, and I would have taken to my heels had not my father courageously approached the man, (whom he addressed as his dear friend), and explained to him the cause of our coming, and our desire to buy a dinner. This explanation seemed plausible to Jesse, who invited us to enter his "residence," in the interior of which shabby affair we perceived the same untidiness that prevailed in the yard.

Sneering with scorn, the toothless virago watched us appeasing our hunger with the coarse fare of sour milk and dry corn-bread, while the expression on the face of our host, squatting near by, was such as a criminal might wear on being acquitted through lack of evidence. Our repast completed, my father took his meerschäum cigar-holder from its case and, drawing several cigars out of his pocket, offered them to our temporary landlord. That individual seized not only the cigars, but the holder also, grinning while examining it.

"That's a fine pipe," he said. "I'll keep it for myself!" and, a moment later, the cigar-holder was securely locked in a small cupboard, which was fastened to the wall in one corner of the room. Upon my father's remonstrating, Jesse, encouraged by his termagant's shriek to "Give it to 'em!" made us understand in unmistakable language, that we had better pay our debts and "clear out." Complying with this demand my father put his hand into his pocket, and asked the amount we owed.

"You owe us five dollars," screeched the hag, throwing eager glances at the money. By this time we were convinced that we were at the mercy of a dangerous person, for which reason my father paid the extorted amount.

After we had left the house, my father assisted me to mount my horse, with an air of calmness and composure which was so contrary to his customary demeanor when wronged by anyone, that I suspected he was endeavoring to conceal from me the peril of our plight, which he doubtless knew to be more serious than I suspected. He had evidently noticed something which had escaped my younger eyes.

In spite of my father's precautions, however, I was not to remain ignorant of Jesse's evil intention very long, for, just as we were riding through the gate, our thievish host, instigated by his pernicious wench, appeared upon the scene with a gun, which he precipitately fired in our direction. My father ducked his head; his hat flew off, his horse reared, and immediately galloped off at full speed.

"Hold tight!" shouted my father, as he was carried past me by his frightened charger, while I sat aghast on my nag, which was performing grotesque maneuvers. Instantly obeying the command, I convulsively clung to the neck of my horse, which, a second later, followed the example set by its mate, dashing off like a discharged projectile. Away we flew, clinging to the necks of our steeds, which, plunging through a sea of sand-colored grass, made desperate efforts to convey us beyond the reach of the assassin.

We did not regain control of our horses until we again came to the little brook, whose refreshing waters this time served to wash from my father's hair the blood which oozed from his scalp in several places.

"Child," said my father, trying to calm me, "rejoice that the villain's gun was charged merely with grape-shot; had the shot been heavier, I fear that you would have had to return home without me."

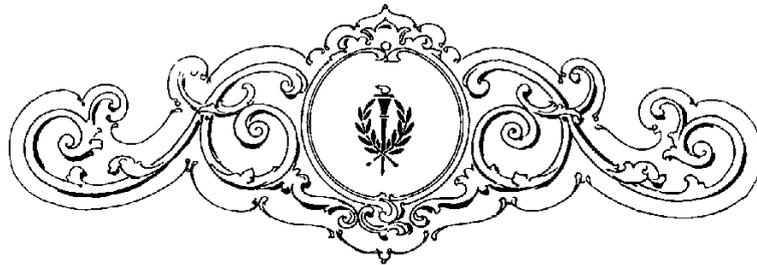

Two worm-like swellings on the neck of the thoroughbred indicated that the valuable animal had also received from the prairie-man's gun a parting remembrance of grape-shot. After carefully bathing the blood from my father's hair and tending to the slight injuries done the horse, we resumed our homeward journey. Wounded and fatigued, like ambushed knights, we re-entered Mexico City about four o'clock. Here our friends insisted that we should file a suit against the ruffian, and Mr. Walsh demanded a compensation for his injured animal.

On the following day Jesse McNulte and his companion were arrested. Since the Grand Jury was just in session, the trial followed within a few days. Let it suffice to say that, as a result of the trial, in which my father's cigar-holder and his shot-riddled hat (which articles had been found, the one in McNulte's closet and the other in a ditch in front of his place), were important evidences. Both culprits received due punishment. Owing to Jesse's inability to pay Mr. Walsh's damage suit, his home and farm were sold by the County Sheriff.

Through Trust

THEY all wondered who Claire Clyde would marry. She had many suitors, but she never had seemed to favor one more than another. She was decidedly pretty and dashing, and, though not the least bit vain, she always insisted she must marry a handsome man.

The little boat rounded the curve of the deep, clear lake. Claire was seated at the stern and near the bow sat a young man, lightly fingering the oars.

"All alone, with nothing but the water, the sky, the moon, and happiness," she whispered. He watched the glint of gold in her hair, and the marvelous whiteness of her rounded arm.

"What are you thinking of?" she asked.

"I was thinking," came the murmured reply, "that I must have been born under a fortunate star."

"I wasn't thinking at all," she said. "I had time only to be happy near you."

"Look where you are," he laughed. She rocked the boat gently as she came and sat beside him, leaning her head on his shoulder.

"You are tired, my darling."

"No, not unless one can be overburdened with joy."

"You trust me, trust me fully?"

"Hush! I have given all to you, all my life to come."

"His face suddenly turned pale in the moonlight. He drew his arm from her waist. "Sit opposite me, darling," he said, gently, "I have something to say."

She smiled, and did as he bade.

Then, without speaking, he rolled up his left sleeve and held the half-bared arm before her eyes. She shrank back with a startled cry, and hid her face. Then she raised her eyes slowly, as though she must have been mistaken, and took a long look at the red brand on his forearm.

"Who put it there?" she gasped.

"The authorities."

"What! Oh, no, no, no! 'tis not true, not true! I was not going to marry a felon. What? Yes? Then, you—coward—do not speak to me. Why, why did they put it there?"

"Sheep stealing."

"Move farther from me. Never let your hand touch mine again. The stain upon your arm has burned into my blood. Row to the shore."

He made no move to touch the oars.

"If you only knew," he answered, "how that brand had scorched my soul and withered up all the man in me; but I was not guilty of the crime they put upon me. I was a mere boy when it happened. My playmate and I followed the others for adventure—the trained, experienced men, hardened in their trade. They had practiced for years without being found out. On that one night came the discovery and the disgrace of all. My friend and I were taken up with the rest. We were little more than children, I being but fourteen and my friend but fifteen years of age, and we had gone along merely out of curiosity. None of our remonstrances were heard. We begged, pleaded, cried, prayed to the hardened man, who tortured our feelings a thousand times more than our bodies; but he wouldn't hear. 'Go along,' he said sternly, with a stamp on you that will never need gluing."

"I went home, resolved in my heart to kill my persecutor. I showed that badge of shame to no one, but I felt it at all times. Wherever I went, I imagined people were looking at my arm. I could get no coat heavy enough—I was always sure the ugly brand shone through. Each day the thought of it worked more and more fiercely at my heart. I tried to remove it in every possible way. Every remedy seemed only to increase its brilliancy. I worried over it for two long years; then I determined to be a man. Through the hope of one night's pleasure I had blighted my whole career. I went on to college, and graduated last year. I did my best, and all were proud of me; yet every now and then the mark of disgrace that the cruel Westerners had given me stung my soul to anguish. I met you a year ago. Since then you alone have occupied my thoughts. In my love for you, I seemed to forget my childhood's disgrace. You gave yourself to me, and then that outrage on my arm cried aloud again. A felon! a felon! Would she trust one marred by a felon's stamp? I went West to get my revenge. I found the persecutor of my childhood dying of a slow fever. One of his arms lay above the pillow, and it bore the felon's mark. I could do nothing—Who could tell?—perhaps he had been hardened—hardened by someone who had treated him as he had done me. You are the first person to whom I have ever spoken concerning this scar. I couldn't marry you without a reproach in my heart."

Claire, gazing into his eyes, shuddered as she asked: "Why didn't you tell me in the beginning?"

"I was afraid that I might lose you. I wanted to keep you as long as I could."

"It wasn't your fault, I know—but that brand, Heavens!—I—I am only a woman; you can't blame me—It should stain, and burn, and singe—then freeze my soul! I am afraid of it. Cover it up; cover it up!"

His lips came together, and his eyes closed with pain. She looked over at him, miserable, wistful, and longing. Suddenly her eyes filled with tears.

"Oh, Dick, Dick, reach out and gather me together," she sobbed. "I love you, Dick. Wait just a little—with the other arm."

He held her with his unscarred arm.

"Doesn't it make any difference?" he asked.

"It can't, no matter what I do. How dared they blemish you, so red and horrid? But it isn't on your soul. Forgive me, Dick, for speaking as I did. Oh, Dick, hold me tight with both arms. It doesn't burn me the least bit."

FLORENCE GALE ROSIN.

Soirée Française

“Ce que l’ on comprend bien s’énonce clairement
 “Et les mots, pour le dire arrivent aisément.”

— Boileau.

LE 24 Mars, 1904, la grande salle de réunions de Walnut Hills High School était comble. Un auditoire nombreux composé des élèves, de leurs parents et de leurs amis se pressait pour assister à la troisièmè “Soirée française” donnée par les élèves de Monsieur Alfred Nonnez. Les décors avaient été arrangés par les élèves eux-mêmes et la scène présentait un coup d’ ail des plus artistiques.

Les spectateurs ont fait aux excellents interprètes un accueil des plus sympathiques et des plus enthousiastes.

Le programme était le suivant:

1. Deux morceaux admirablement rendus par l’orchestre de l’école.

2. Deux morceaux de chants: “La Mort de Jeanne d’arc et “Carmen” par Mademoiselle Helen Brown dont la voix melodieuse a charmé toute l’assistance.

3. “La chanson de Fortunio” récitation finement dite par Mademoiselle Julia Baxter qui s’est montrée à la fois simple et touchante.

4. “La lettre chargée” Comédie en un acts par Labiche avec la distribution suivants:

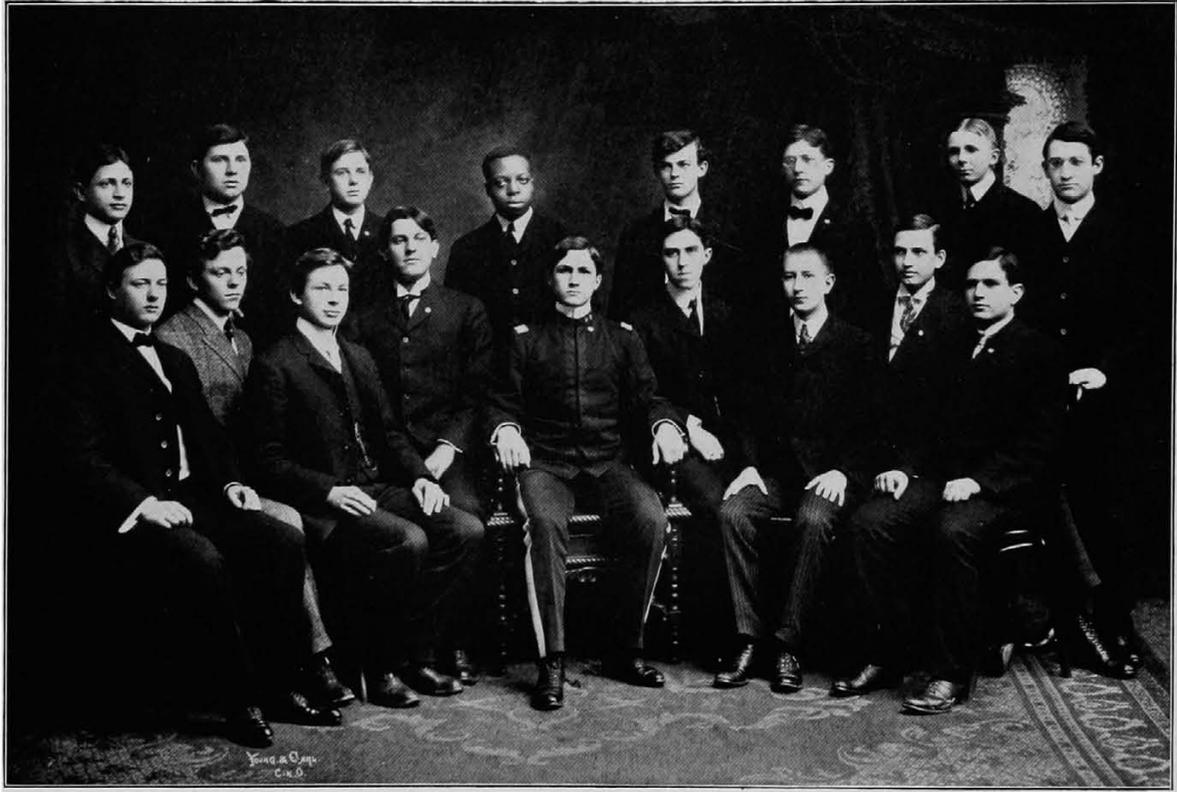

Hortense, jeune veuve,	MLLE. VIOIA PFAFF
Francine, femme de chambre,	MLLE. WINEFRED HYDE
Fougasson, Américain,	M. EDWIN MITCHELL
Hector de Courvalin, fiancé d’ Hortense,	M. MILLARD LOWENSTEIN

Les acteurs ont enlevé cette petite piece avec un ensemble parfait. Leur excellente prononciation et leur finesse de diction ont fait le plus grand honneur à notre professeur de français Monsieur Alfred Nonnez.

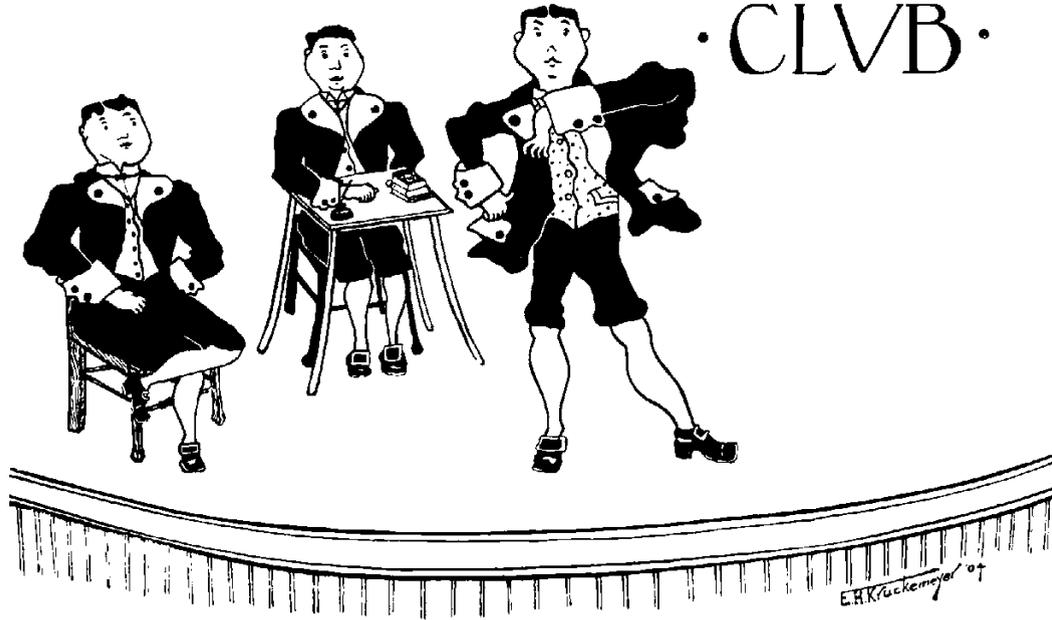

JOSEPHINE M. BERMAN.

History of Walnut Hills High School

Debating Society

HE Walnut Hills High School Debating Society (locally spoken of as the Senior Debating Club) was formed in 1897. It has, since its organization, received the zealous support of the student body and the earnest co-operation of the instructors; and not only has it been of much benefit to its members in affording them information upon momentous questions and in developing their faculty of public speaking, but it has given the school an enviable reputation for efficient and forcible oratory. The club, which is composed of Third and Fourth Year students, holds weekly meetings in the Auditorium. On these occasions, the questions discussed are educational, social, economical, or political. The speakers, six in number, three representing the affirmative side and three the negative, are selected by a committee chosen by the President. The purpose of the society, as stated in its constitution, is "to promote and encourage the art of public debating." Besides participating in the regular weekly contests conducted among themselves, the club members from time to time engage in debate with similar organizations of rival schools.

The first public controversy in which Walnut Hills High School took part was held in the main hall of the school building, on March 17, 1899, against Hughes High School. The affirmative of the proposition, "Resolved, That the Filipinos should be restricted from having equal suffrage with the Americans," was supported by Messrs. Brown, Gaddis, and Eppstein, of Walnut Hills, and the negative by Messrs. Rosenberg, Heintz, and Wise, of Hughes. The decision was granted to the affirmative.

In 1900, the first debate with Steele High School, of Dayton, Ohio, was held in Dayton, the proposition being, "Resolved, That England is justified in the Boer War." Walnut Hills defended the affirmative, her speakers being Messrs. Klein, Brown, and Fox. The judges awarded the decision to the negative.

During the same year a debate took place between the Senior and Junior Debating Clubs. Messrs. Winkler, Worcester, and Bacharach, of the Junior Club, advocated the negative of the proposition, "Resolved, That the railroads should be under the control of the United States Government." The affirmative was upheld by Messrs. Melhope, Ricker, and Denham, the representatives of the Senior Club. The negative was given the decision.

In 1901, the Auditorium, in Cincinnati, was occupied by a large audience assembled to hear the second debate with Steele High School. Magnificent souvenir programmes were printed for this occasion. The proposition of debate, "Resolved, That the United States should share in the partition of China, should the Powers decide upon that course in the final settlement of the Chinese Question," was defended on the affirmative by Messrs. Bacharach, Winkler, and Thomas, of Walnut Hills; on the negative by the representatives of the Dayton School. Messrs. Vogt, Schmidt, and Smith. A decision was rendered for the affirmative.

During the same year, the second contest between the Junior and Senior Clubs took place. The subject was, "Resolved, That the United States should subsidize her merchant marine." The Junior Club, represented by Messrs. Keyt, Gaddis, and Kronenberger, supported the affirmative, and Messrs. Brown, Drackett, and Goldsmith, of the Senior Club, the negative. The judges rendered a decision for the affirmative.

On March 7, 1902, the third debate with Steele High School was held in Dayton. The proposition under debate was, "Resolved, That the United States should resist—by force, if need be—the colonization of South America by any European Power." The case of the affirmative was presented by Messrs. Bacharach, Weber, and Keyt, of Walnut Hills; Messrs. Dodgson, McCandless, and Argabright, of Steele, presented the negative. The decision was awarded to the negative.

The Senior and Junior Clubs held their third debate at the Alms Hotel, on the evening of Friday, April 18, 1902. Messrs. Otte, McKibben, and Hall, of the Junior Club, upheld the affirmative of the proposition, "Resolved, That the United States should adopt the proposed system of reciprocity with regard to the trade with Cuba." Messrs. Mendel, Louis, and Rover, of the Senior Club, maintained the negative. The affirmative received the decision.

A challenge was now received from the Louisville Male High School, a famous institution of Kentucky. This challenge, having been accepted, Walnut Hills journeyed to Louisville to take part in the first interstate debate which she had ever arranged. The debate, held in the huge Auditorium of Louisville, was upon the following proposition: "Resolved, That the modern Trust is a menace to the country's welfare. Messrs. Keyt, Wallenstein, and Bacharach, of Walnut Hills, advocated the affirmative, while the negative was upheld by Messrs. Lapp, Pulverman, and Lehman, of Louisville. A decision was announced in favor of the affirmative side.

A second debate was held with Louisville, in the Auditorium, in Cincinnati, on the evening of Saturday, March 21, 1903, on the proposition, "Resolved, That municipalities should own and operate their own street railways, lighting, and water-supply systems." Walnut Hills defended the affirmative, her representatives being Messrs. Rover, Hall, and Keyt. Messrs. Baskett, Wickliff, and Lawson, of the Kentucky High School, maintained the negative. The judges awarded a decision in favor of the negative. An interesting feature of this debate was the extensive use of charts containing statistics by the Louisville debaters.

On the afternoon of Tuesday, April 28, 1903, Walnut Hills held her first debate with Woodward High School. This contest was fought in the Woodward Assembly Hall, the subject of discussion being, "Resolved, That Trusts are a menace to society, and therefore should be restrained." Walnut Hills upheld the affirmative, her advocates being Messrs. Goldsmith, Mason, and Otte, while Messrs. Aughinbaugh, Loewe, and Glickert, of Woodward, maintained the negative side of the question. The judges awarded the affirmative the decision. The rivalry between the two schools was well illustrated by the spirited character of the debate, and the huge audience, which filled to overflowing the large Woodward Hall.

On the afternoon of February 19, 1904, a second debate with Woodward was held, which took place in the Walnut High-School Auditorium. The proposition discussed, "Resolved, That there should be further legislation by the United States restricting immigration," was upheld on the affirmative by Messrs. Mason, Goldsmith, and Cummins, of Walnut Hills, and on the negative by Messrs. Glickert, Weiland, and Harris, of Woodward. A decision was announced in favor of the affirmative.

On the afternoon of Wednesday, March 2, 1904, the Junior and Senior Clubs held their fourth debate. The subject was as follows: "Resolved, That the immediate recognition of the Republic of Panama by the United States was unjustifiable." The representatives of the Junior Club, Messrs. Marxs, Otte, and Shohl, upheld the affirmative, while Messrs. Brumleve, Kruckemeyer, and O'Kane, of the Senior Club, supported the negative. A decision was rendered for the affirmative.

Many distinguished citizens of Cincinnati are to be thanked for the assistance they have accorded the club, either by giving their services as judges in the various debates in which Walnut Hills has participated, or by otherwise extending their aid. The Society takes this opportunity to acknowledge its obligations to the gentlemen whose names are included in the following list: Judge Howard Ferris, Judge Rufus B. Smith, Judge F. S. Spiegel, Judge A. C. Thompson, Judge Wm. Worthington, Rev. C. W. Blodgett, Rev. M. B. Fuller, Rev. Charles Frederick Goss, Rev. E. Trumbull Lee, Rev. Dr. David Philipson, Dr. Richard G. Boone, Dr. F.
